THE SPRINGFIELD GLOBE,
Volume V. Number 241

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO, WEDNESDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 2, 1885.

THE SPRINGFIELD REPUBLICAN
Volume XXXI. Number 1310.

Indications.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—For Ohio Valley and Tennessee, continued cool and generally fair weather; light variable winds.

NEAT.

Neat neckwear. Neat is the word—neat. Not alone neckwear, but all the little belongings of gentlemen's dress. Neat is the word. There is a great deal of nonsense abroad about highness of style. Whatever of truth there is in it is simple neatness. But people differ about matter of taste in dress, just as they differ about matters of taste in food.

There is a process of education going on in the civilized world that nobody speaks of. People are growing out of flashy, fiery tastes into delicate tastes in every sense. There are stages of growth and development from total depravity up. Neatness is the highest yet come to the race; and somehow neatness in man's dress is different from neatness in woman's dress. The best of all words in both is neatness.

Twenty-two feet of show case to the right of west entrance shows our stock in neckwear neatness at accommodating prices. One case shows a medley of quarter scarf ties; another the white and delicate tints in fine party ties; another the belongings, pins, sleeve buttons, collar buttons, cuff holders, etc.; on shelves above, neatness in collars and cuffs.

If it's string ties, or fancy bows, or strapped scarfs at a quarter, half, three-quarters or an even dollar, everybody who has bought once comes again.

Half the 4-ply linen collars and cuffs sold in the city come from here. Why? Because the prices are so different.

White shirts too. No. 8 at 75c. No. 6 $1. No. 5 $1.25. Peerless—as good as their name.

Fancy percale shirts we probably show in greater variety of new patterns than can be found among small dealers, and still we seldom think to speak of them.

The cage on which nine miners were being lowered into the shaft, nearly reached the bottom when a mass of loose coal and rock fell from the side of the shaft down the pit, striking and demolishing the cage, which was made of heavy timber and iron, and instantly killed four men and wounded fatally two others, while the other three were seriously injured.

Sheep Killed by Dogs.

SPECIAL TO THE GLOBE-PUBLIC.
CHARLES, O., Sept. 1.—Last night dogs got into a flock of 120 head of sheep belonging to Robert and Alexander McBeath, a few miles north-west of Upperville, and played havoc among the flock. Fifteen head were killed and torn to pieces by the hungry curs. Forty or fifty were so badly injured that they will be almost worthless, and the remainder of the flock badly frightened. The loss to the owner will be about $125.

Excitement in San Francisco—Infected Raisins.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 2.—Considerable excitement has been caused among the importers of groceries in this city by statements tending to show the existence of a scheme to introduce cholera-infected raisins into the United States. Experienced packers declare that there is a great danger of the introduction of cholera microbes in raisins from the infected districts of Spain, as packed fruit usually absorbs microbes and retains them for a great length of time.

WHITE SLAVES IN LONDON.

Shop Girls Who Are Compelled to Work Sixteen and Seventeen Hours Per Day.

LONDON, Aug. 30.—The agitation over the long hours that the conductors and drivers in the employ of the street railway companies—sixteen hours a day—have to work, has led to inquiries as to the hours of labor in other employments. Some of the confectioners' shops and eating houses in the Strand and in the neighborhood of theaters open at seven in the morning and do not close till midnight, and the one set of girls serve behind the counters at the table all the time. This makes seventeen hours, with the reduction, however, of half an hour for dinner and half an hour for tea, which they get on the premises. The girls in Messrs. Spicers & Ponds' buffets in the inventories were required to stand from 9 in the morning until 10 at night, and were not allowed, during these long hours, to sit down, the old idea of the shop-keeper being urged, that it does not look "business-like" to see the assistants resting. In many of the haberdasheries and other small, ill-ventilated shops in the east end the hours of work for 7 or 8 in the morning till 10, 11, and 12 at night, with two hours, and sometimes only one hour, for meals. And while the factories act provides that girls of a certain age shall not be kept at work beyond eight o'clock at night without the fact being registered, it is known that milliners and dressmakers, apprentices and girls, often more children, employed in leather manufactories, are detained after the legal hours, and are made to work in the night, where the lights will not attract the attention of the inspectors. The slavery exists, and the worst feature is the slaves will not complain and put the machinery of the law in motion, knowing that any complaint will result in their dismissal, and that there are hundreds ready to accept their places and wear out their young lives for a crust of bread.

Asking for the Revocation of a Department Order.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—Acting Post Master General Stevenson today received a delegation, composed of Representatives Willis and Lafont, of Kentucky, Representative Klemor, of Indiana, Judge Murray, of Kentucky, and Contractor Hite, of Louisville, who came to present arguments showing the necessity of the revocation of the order discontinuing the steamboat and ferry boats between Louisville, Ky., and Evansville, Ind. After hearing the statements made by the delegation, the acting postmaster general reserved his decision, and it is probable that no final action will be taken in the matter until the return of Post Master General Vilas.

FORAKER'S FIRST SPEECH

THE REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE OPENS HIS CAMPAIGN.

He Addresses a Meeting at Portsmouth on Current Issues—A Sensible Definition of the Respective Attitudes of the Two Parties on the Liquor Question.

PORTSMOUTH, O., Sept. 1.—Hon. J. B. Foraker, republican candidate for governor of Ohio, delivered his formal opening campaign speech today in this city. In a comprehensive review of the liquor question, he said: The difference between the democratic and the republican party is simply this, and it is the same difference that has always existed between these parties with respect to important public questions: The republican party takes hold of the situation as it is, and proposes to deal with it in a practical, sensible, manly, outspoken, fearless manner, so as to subvert and promote the public welfare and the best interests of the people of the state. The democratic party proposes to ignore the practical situation and profess to have ideas that it knows are impossible of practical application. If it were possible to have license, it could not be had for two years yet to come. It is hardly probable, if our democratic friends should have the legislature, that they would have it by a three-fifths vote. Can they get a legislature in which they have a three-fifths majority, and every single one of them in favor of license, it will be impossible for them to even submit the question to the people. This of itself is so improbable that it is hardly necessary to consider the further improbability of the people ever adopting any such measure. It is manifest, therefore, if the people of Ohio would have this matter dealt with, they must elect the republican party to power.

In conclusion Mr. Foraker said:

We occasionally hear men talking about not being satisfied with the republican party, and intending to turn their backs upon it, because it does not come up to the full measure of all they would have it to do. Let such men remember that they are a part of the republican party; the party is not something other than themselves. They have part and parcel in all its glories of the past. If they are proud of that past, let them stand by their party, that has been the salvation of the country in the days gone by, and is the hope of the country in the days that are to come. It has been a great power and instrument for good in the land. It has never failed to accomplish its high mission. In the party, therefore, is the place for all who esteem themselves republicans to remain. Stay within its lines, follow its flag and help it to work out the glorious destiny of the American people.

CUT THEIR CAPTIVE'S HAND OFF

The Horrible Means Resorted to by Turkish Brigands to Extort a Ransom.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 1.—Some time since Bulgarian brigands carried off a young lady and demanded a heavy ransom for her return. Owing to a delay in forwarding the money the brigands sent to the lady's father the left hand of the lady, which had been cut off at the wrist, and was recognized by the father, who was a Greek merchant, would get back his daughter in sections if he did not make haste with the ransom. He raised the money and received his child minus the left hand. More recently two ladies belonging to families of rank in Mexico, in Epirus, were abducted and carried into the Epirus mountains. The abductors demanded a ransom of $20,000 apiece. Fear that the ladies would be treated like the Greek merchant's daughter stimulated their families, and the agents of the brigands were paid $10,000 last week, and the ladies have been safely restored to their homes. They say they were well treated and were entirely free from insult, and were given such comforts as the brigands possessed. They lived in a cave, and the most irksome part of their imprisonment was during the absence of their captors, when they were securely chained to a large iron ring in the side of the cave to prevent their escape.

DON'T GIVE IT AWAY!

BUT HERE'S THE OFFICIAL SLATE FOR THE POSTOFFICE.

F. M. Hagan for Postmaster and Judy Aaron for First Clerk and Comptroller of Appointments—How the Schemes are Worked by a Combination of Influences.

Murder will out, and so will Democratic schemes once in a while. Mention was made in this paper yesterday morning that the wires were working for a change in the Springfield postoffice before October 1. Yesterday afternoon the whole story, or most of it, was gotten by a Globe-Republican reporter, and here it is.

As soon as it was known that Cleveland was elected last fall, Judy Aaron, who is known to be about as smooth a schemer as can be found in a day's journey, began to lay the ropes to capture a soft place for himself in the Springfield postoffice. His position as private secretary to Adjutant General Finley gave him considerable advantage, by making him well acquainted with the civil and military circles. He gave him opportunities to make himself very useful to them at times, and he now stands high in
